Appeal of Vermont Service Center Decision

Form I-129, Petition for Nonimmigrant Worker (H-1B)

The Petitioner, a provider of health insurance products, seeks to temporarily employ the Beneficiary as a “consultant” under the H-1B nonimmigrant classification for specialty occupations. See Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act) section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b). The H-1B program allows a U.S. employer to temporarily employ a qualified foreign worker in a position that requires both (a) the theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge and (b) the attainment of a bachelor’s or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum prerequisite for entry into the position.

The Vermont Service Center Director denied the petition, concluding that the Petitioner had not established that the proffered position is a specialty occupation. On appeal, the Petitioner asserts that the Director erred and that the proffered position is a specialty occupation.

The Petitioner bears the burden of proof to demonstrate eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence. Section 291 of the Act; Matter of Chawathe, 25 I&N Dec. 369, 375 (AAO 2010). We review the questions in this matter de novo. See Matter of Christo’s Inc., 26 I&N Dec. 537, 537 n.2 (AAO 2015). Upon de novo review, we will dismiss the appeal.

I. LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Section 214(i)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(i)(1), defines the term “specialty occupation” as an occupation that requires:

- (A) theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge, and
- (B) attainment of a bachelor’s or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) largely restates this statutory definition and adds a non-exhaustive list of fields of endeavor.

II. ANALYSIS

For the reasons discussed below, we have determined that the Petitioner has not demonstrated that the proffered position qualifies as a specialty occupation.¹ Specifically, as a result of the Petitioner's own requirements, the proffered position does not meet the statutory or regulatory definition of a specialty occupation.

The record must establish that the performance of the duties of the proffered position requires both the theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge and the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as the minimum for entry into the occupation. See section 214(i)(1) of the Act; 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) (defining the term "specialty occupation"). In other words, a petitioner must demonstrate that the proffered position requires a precise and specific course of study that relates directly and closely to the position in question. Here, the Petitioner indicated in the initial filing, and again in response to the Director's request for evidence (RFE), that the minimum education required for the proffered position is a "Bachelor's degree in Business Administration, Management, Project Management, or a directly related field."

The Petitioner also provides an opinion letter from [REDACTED] who similarly concludes that the duties of the proffered position require "at least a bachelor's degree in Business Administration, Management, Project Management, or a related field." Like the Petitioner, he opines that the proffered position requires at least a bachelor's degree in business administration, without specifying any particular concentration for this broad-based, general degree. Notably, it appears as though the professor used a template with conclusory findings and generic analysis to support the Petitioner's particular position as a specialty occupation. The lack of cogent analysis specific to nature of the Petitioner's position strongly suggests that the professor was asked to confirm a preconceived notion as to the required degrees, not objectively assess the proffered position and opine on the minimum bachelor's degree required, if any.

Additionally, Service records show that this same template with the same language and similar conclusory statements regarding different occupations, and also without supporting analysis has been submitted on behalf of other petitioners. These similarities lend further support to the suggestion that the author of the opinion was asked to confirm preconceived notions. While we will review the opinion presented, it has little probative value as it does not include sufficient substantive analysis of the duties of the particular position that is the subject of this petition.

For the reasons discussed, we find that the opinion letter provided lends little probative value to the matter here. As a matter of discretion, we may use opinion statements submitted by the Petitioner as advisory. Matter of Caron Int'l, Inc., 19 I&N Dec. 791, 795 (Comm'r 1988). However, we will reject an opinion or give it less weight if it is not in accord with other information in the record or if it is in any way questionable. Id. We are ultimately responsible for making the final determination regarding an individual's eligibility for the benefit sought; the submission of expert opinion letters is not presumptive evidence of eligibility. Id.; see also Matter of V-K-, 24 I&N Dec. 500, 502 n.2 (BIA

2008) (“[E]xpert opinion testimony, while undoubtedly a form of evidence, does not purport to be evidence as to ‘fact’ but rather is admissible only if ‘it will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue.’”). For the sake of brevity, we will not address other deficiencies within the professor’s analyses of the proffered position.

On appeal, the Petitioner asserts that it has “demonstrated that the nature of the specific duties is so specialized and complex that the knowledge required to perform them is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate degree (in Business Administration, Management, or a directly related field.)” However, the Petitioner’s stated minimum requirements, for instance – that a general bachelor’s degree in business administration or management - alone indicates that the proffered position is not in fact a specialty occupation.

We conclude the Petitioner’s claim that a bachelor’s degree such as business administration is a sufficient minimum requirement for entry into the proffered position is inadequate to establish that the proposed position qualifies as a specialty occupation. Although a general-purpose bachelor’s degree, such as a degree in business administration, may be a legitimate prerequisite for a particular position, requiring such a degree, without more, will not justify a conclusion that a particular position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation. See Royal Siam Corp. v. Chertoff, 484 F.3d 139, 147 (1st Cir. 2007). Specifically, the judge explained in Royal Siam, 484 F.3d at 147, that:

The courts and the agency consistently have stated that, although a general-purpose bachelor’s degree, such as a business administration degree, may be a legitimate prerequisite for a particular position, requiring such a degree, without more, will not justify the granting of a petition for an H-1B specialty occupation visa. See, e.g., Tapis Int’l v. INS, 94 F.Supp.2d 172, 175-76 (D. Mass. 2000); Shanti, 36 F. Supp. 2d at 1164-66; cf. Matter of Michael Hertz Assocs., 19 I & N Dec. 558, 560 ([Comm’r] 1988) (providing frequently cited analysis in connection with a conceptually similar provision). This is as it should be: otherwise, an employer could ensure the granting of a specialty occupation visa petition by the simple expedient of creating a generic (and essentially artificial) degree requirement.

Since there must be a close correlation between the required specialized studies and the position, the requirement of a degree with a generalized title, such as business administration, without further specification, does not establish the position as a specialty occupation. Cf. Matter of Michael Hertz Assocs., 19 I&N Dec. 558, 560 (Comm’r 1988).

We acknowledge that in satisfying the specialty occupation requirements both the Act and the regulations require a bachelor’s degree in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, and that this language indicates that the degree does not have to be a degree in a single specific specialty. However, in promulgating the H-1B regulations, the former INS made clear that the definition of the term “specialty occupation” could not be expanded “to include those occupations which did not require a bachelor’s degree in the specific specialty.” Temporary Alien Workers Seeking Classification Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 56 Fed. Reg. 61,111, 61,112 (Dec. 2, 1991) (to be codified at 8 C.F.R. pt. 214). More specifically, in responding to comments that “the definition of specialty occupation was too severe and would exclude certain occupations from classification as specialty occupations,” the former INS stated that “[t]he definition of specialty occupation contained in the statute contains this requirement [for a bachelor's degree in the specific specialty, or its equivalent]" and, therefore, "may not be amended in the final rule." Id. The issue here is the Petitioner's requirement of a general bachelor's degree such as business administration for the proffered position, which does not constitute a bachelor's in a specific specialty or its equivalent.²

For all of these reasons, the Petitioner has not demonstrated that the proffered position requires anything more than a general bachelor's degree. As explained above, the statutory and regulatory definition of a specialty occupation requires a degree in a specific specialty that is directly related to the proposed position.

As a result, it is unnecessary to address the regulatory criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A)(1)-(4).³ We acknowledge that the Director concluded the evidence was insufficient to establish that the position qualified as a specialty occupation under at least one of the criteria in 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A). On appeal, the Petitioner asserts that the proffered position meets criterion (4) of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), and does not challenge the Director's determination of ineligibility under criteria (1), (2), or (3) of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A). However, even if the Petitioner were to demonstrate that it satisfied one of the listed criteria, this would not result in this petition's approval, as it still has not shown that the proffered position satisfies the statutory or regulatory definition of a "specialty occupation." See section 214(i)(1) of the Act and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). The statutory definition constitutes the primary requirement for a position to qualify as a specialty occupation. Only after this antecedent requirement has been met, may a petitioner move to demonstrate how it may satisfy one of the supplementary criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A).

III. CONCLUSION

In visa petition proceedings, it is a petitioner's burden to establish eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. In this matter, the Petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.

² Section 214(i)(1) of the Act; 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

³ The regulations provide that the offered position must also meet one of the following criteria to qualify as a specialty occupation:

- (1) A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;
- (2) The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;
- (3) The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or
- (4) The nature of the specific duties [is] so specialized and complex that knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.
